

Brand Benchmark Study

Understand How Your Brand Resonates Within the Markets in Which You Serve

Research from Raddon indicates that as the industry reaches the ceiling on the share of their customers' wallet, future growth will rely on the financial institutions' ability to shift their focus from internal to external.

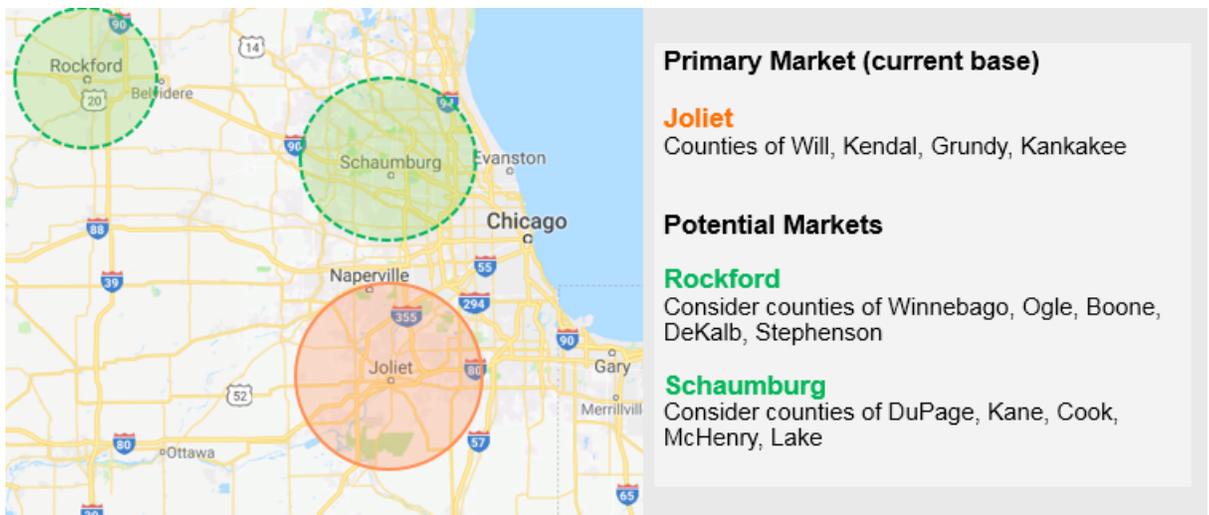

Raddon's Branch Benchmark Study results reveal that as strength of brand increases, market share grows. Knowing the perception of your brand within your market is critical to sustained growth. Results provide insight on how your brand is resonating within your markets and helps to uncover areas of opportunity.

The Raddon Brand Benchmark Study helps financial services organizations understand the following:

- The level of awareness of your institution among consumers in your markets
- How the strength of your brand compares to other organizations like yours serving similar markets
- Which competitors have the strongest presence in your market
- What your fair share of the market consists of – taking the number of competitors into consideration
- How consumers relate to your brand

Determining Market Potential

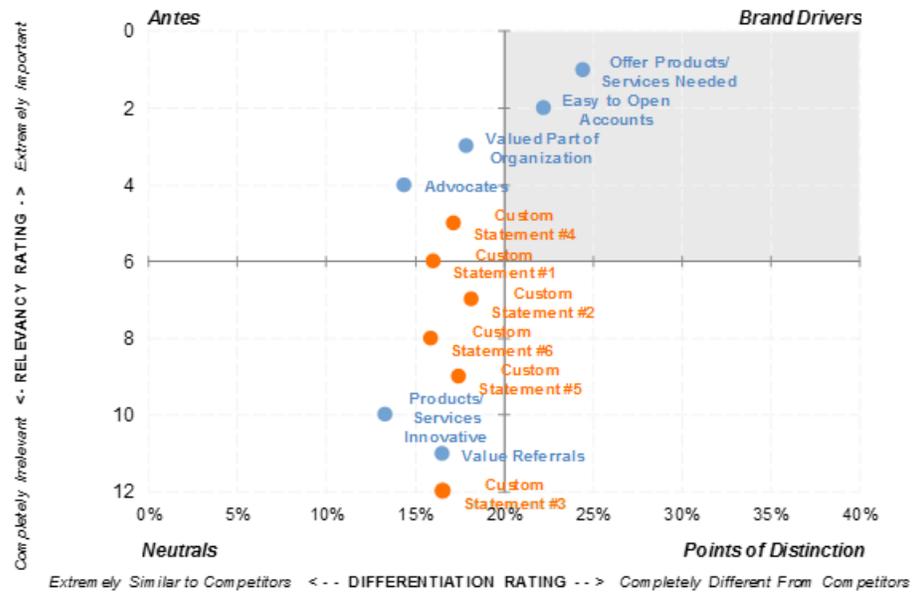

Understanding the penetration of your brand within your defined market is the first step in the analysis. Raddon's consultants will work with your team to establish your market boundaries. Then, using those parameters, Raddon will determine the reach of your brand today. Areas where there is little or no penetration provide opportunities for growth. Prime target areas will be explored for potential goals.

Penetration vs. Resonance

Specific elements of your brand have helped your organization penetrate within certain areas of your market. Raddon will measure the strength of your brand elements versus those of your competitors to uncover which items are resonating within certain areas.

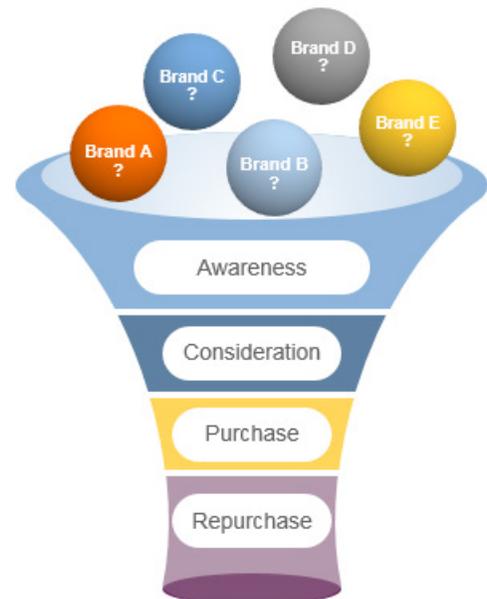

Coupling this information with the market potential analysis will provide guidance on the elements of your brand that are most impactful. In addition, results will provide insight on how to gain an edge over competitors.

Measuring the Strength Your Brand

Raddon will determine the strength of your brand by administering a survey to targets in your defined markets. The survey will cover the following topics:

- Awareness – Are respondents aware of your organization? Do they view it favorably?
- Consideration – When in need, is your brand considered?
- Performance – What is unique about your offering? Does the consumer decide to purchase from you?
- Repurchase – Does your brand deliver on its promises? If given the opportunity, would the consumer purchase from you again?
